- About 40 single-engine, low-wing monoplanes, some being worked on, were parked in front of the partially closed hangars of the JUETERBOG-ALTES LAGER (N 52/E 69) airfield.
Description: Two-seat, in-line engine; antenna rod forward of cockpit; cannon firing rearward from aft section of cockpit; landing gear retracting inward; no cowling, pyramidal rudder assembly; upper section painted a dark green, lower section a light blue; rudder assembly tips of individual planes painted white.
- Work was still being done on the fenced-in tank installations in the southeast section of the field. Three containers the size of a railroad tank car were half dug into the ground. Sixteen railroad freight cars were being shunted on the spur track by a Diesel engine. About 50 empty bomb boxes, probably for bombs of a caliber of 250 kg, were lying on the eastern edge of the field. The boxes were rather new and had probably been only recently emptied.
- The dependents' quarters at the field were occupied to capacity. Two new biplanes without wings, which were apparently being assembled, were seen in the aircraft park north of the field. A radar set was at the field.

The aircraft described in para 1 are IL-10s, thus again confirming the presence of a ground attack unit at JUETERBOG. [REDACTED] one ground attack [REDACTED] is assumed to be stationed there. Besides this regiment a fighter regiment whose numerical designation is unknown is probably stationed at the field.
